++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rainy in the north, drier and brighter further south.

Today:
Any lingering rain from overnight becomes confined to northern areas through the morning, with the driest conditions further south. Remaining generally quite cloudy, but with occasional sunny spells in the south; feeling warm in these. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain eases through the evening to leave dry conditions for most overnight. The odd outbreak of rain remains possible however, largely for the south and west. Cloudy throughout. Minimum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Monday:
A day of patchy cloud and sunny spells for all. While largely dry, the odd shower remains possible, mainly for the south and west. Rain arrives across Cumbria through evening. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Staying cloudy throughout the period, with only occasional bright or sunny spells. Largely dry however, although with some patchy light rain at times for Tuesday and Wednesday.
